Location

Pool Quay, located in Powys, Wales, is a historic village and ecclesiastical parish. Its name comes from being the highest navigable point on the river near Welshpool, originally called Pool or Poole. The village served as a quay for Pool and was also on the Montgomery Canal, facilitating trans shipment between the canal and river. The town of Welshpool and Oswestry are both just a ten - fifteen minute drive away whilst the town of Shrewsbury is also easily accessible. Good road links provide easy access to the coast whilst motorways link the area to larger cities and airports.

Some History

Pool Quay was once a key location for trade and transportation, with the Severn River and the Montgomery Canal passing through. The village was served by the Cambrian Railways and its successors until 1965, although the station was some distance from the main village. The grounds of the property lay testament to this with lots of railway artefacts and remnants being found within the gardens. The village is near the site of Strata Marcella Abbey where a lot of the building materials for the adjoining barn have originated from. The word Bastel comes from the meaning for a fortified farmhouse, with accommodation for livestock on the vaulted ground-floor, usually found in the Border counties of Scotland and England. The word byre relates to the building where cows are kept.

Proposed Accommodation

The current owners have obtained planning permission in 1997 with the current owners carrying out works to ensure this planning remains in place. Planning is for the development of the barns to create a stunning 5/6 bedroom family home whilst retaining a lot of the barns original character and charm. Within the undeveloped site, prior completed works include, the entire floor has been excavated and a solid concrete sub-floor laid throughout, the rear wall to the east wing has been dismantled and the foundation also excavated. A new deep trench foundation has been formed and a cavity brick wall rebuilt on top replicating the previous English Garden wall bond. Rafters have also been replaced in their entirety and the time framing tied back to the newly built rear wall.

The east half of the building had the original slate threshing floor removed and safeguarded and the timber roof has been removed from site, repaired and reinstated. After the timber frame was re-erected, the dwarf wall plinth was reconstructed off the deep trench foundation to the underside of the sole plate.

There has also been planning permission obtained for a 3 carport garage and workshop.

The Barns

The current owners have already carried out works to the barns with the installation of concrete floors and the preservation and repair of the existing structure. A lot of the existing materials come from the former Monastery that was located near by. Mains services are also available on site.

Scaffolding

We are informed by the owners that the scaffolding will remain at the property and be part of the sale for use of the new owners during the development.
